THE KALDRON has now reached its twelfth year, in fact it has had a birthday since its last appearance, and like all such affairs it was a little on the order of a surprise. To you the surprise may be the mention of your name, the disclosure of some little secret event or peculiar predicament. However, precedent demands that you should be mentioned, and the more you are mentioned the more popular (?) you may consider yourself with your college associates. We aim to present you with a true year-book and most sincerely hope you will be pleased with it. We, to whose lot has fallen the task of nourishing and developing this book, wish to extend our most sincere thanks to the many persons by whose aid this book has been made what it is. Thanking you one and all for your kind attention, we will now plunge into the wilderness of societies, morals, manners and customs of our dear institution.

HISTORY.

OURS is the Century Class and although we are given the name of "The Naughty Naughts," we have proven that there is nothing in a name.

Many innovations took place during our four year's course. We were the first Sophomores to attend the Senior-Sophomore banquet which was a great success; and although several Freshmen were given a night's lodging and breakfast by the kindness of the city officers, our pleasure was unalloyed. Athletics have arisen to a high place, which we cannot help but feel has been due largely to our influence. Some noted members of the different teams belong to our class. When we were Sophomores the first annual Chautauqua outing was held, and this year we helped to inaugurate the custom of celebrating Washington's Birthday with a college dinner.

As Seniors we have been very quiet and have proven our great superiority over former classes by having no class scraps. Not that we have been lacking in class spirit, but we believed that "in unity there is strength." Our politics were comparatively pure, and we had no trouble in electing our officers. We might have found a subject over which to fight, but chose to have only pleasant memories of each other. As a rule "good deeds are soon forgotten," but we hope ours will long remain in the minds of the under-classmen and be an example to them.

The general average of our class is much higher than that of any class which has ever gone out from Allegheny.

Never before have so many girls graduated in one class. Their reputation is so high that, at the very beginning of the spring term, those living at the Hall were given their "Senior privileges," and, for the first time in the history of any class, were allowed to have a separate table, at which no underclassmen could eat, except at rare intervals.

The usual powers of this class have stirred the college even to the depths of its curriculum, and the faculty, recognizing our ability to choose, made all subjects elective to Seniors except philosophy. We are extremely grateful to them for placing such confidence in us, and are proud of the fact that they have had no reason to regret it.

The one great thing for which we will be remembered is that we have departed from one of the well established customs of Commencement Week, and will hold our Class Day Exercises on the campus. To Allegheny this idea is entirely new, but with such brilliancy as our class has, there can be no doubt of its perfect success ; and Class Day will be of greater interest than ever before. Then, too, this campus, so noted for its natural beauty, deserves more attention. Thus we feel that we are to be commended on our action.

In looking back upon our four year's course we have no regrets, for we have done our work honestly and conscientiously, and in going out from college, with mind serene, conscious of inward worth, let us carry with us the words of Channing's Symphony :

"To live content with small means ; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion ; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich ; to listen to stars and birds, babes and sages with open heart ; to study hard ; to think quietly, act frankly, talk gently, await occasions, hurry never ; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common."

HISTORY.

YOU have listened to the conquests of the all important Seniors and will soon know of the defeats and victories suffered and won by Sophomores and Freshmen, but we would have you pause a while and consider us, the Junior Class.

We know from hearsay, aye, even from experience, that the one who perseveres and goes about his own work in a quiet way most often obtains that for which he is striving. An inkling of this great truth was discovered by the success of our banquet last year which, no doubt, was due to the quiet way in which all the arrangements were made and carried out. So this year we resolved to assume the slow and dignified appearance becoming a Junior.

Acting upon this resolution we stood calmly by, and watched the elections of the different classes which were as exciting in Prepdom as among the Seniors. Imagine our surprise when these classes, not satisfied with having their own affairs settled so soon, began to worry about us and to wonder when our election would take place. Therefore, we remained after chapel one day and in a short time had chosen our officers for this year. So quietly and quickly did this happen, that it was not generally known until the report was read in the college paper.

At the college dinner, given on Washington's Birthday, our fellow-students were surprised at the yells and songs which we had prepared for the occasion and also by the force with which they were given. While some had class flags draped above their tables, we needed no such emblem to distinguish us, as our natural brilliancy eclipsed anything which might have been put forth to represent us. Then, our class being the only one represented on the toast list showed in what high esteem we are held not only by ourselves, but also by outsiders.

Though we regret to see the present Senior class leave us, we fell confident that we can appear before you next year with as much self-assurance as Seniors usually have, and also prove ourselves to be of as much and perhaps more importance than we have been this year while Juniors.

I HAVE spent the day reading the year-books of a number of colleges and universities—not with the intention of cribbing, but for a comparative study of the class histories. It took but a glance to show that the historians are in most cases classical students—judging from the old gentlemen with classical names whose blessings they invoke. Alas, I cannot write the history of '02 from a classical standpoint, but why should we care, for no one reads class histories except the Freshmen and people who especially like or dislike the class or the historian.

I can only attempt to show how true is Darwin's idea of "struggle" and "survival of the fittest." All the year-books show a Sophomore-Freshman struggle, and needless to say, the survival of the Sophomore, or as Darwin terms it, the survival of the fittest.

Oh, ye rustic horde of Freshies, why contend and hope for what never has been, never can be yours, from the very nature of environment? Can you not realize that we have the acquired characteristics of a whole year's growth and experience before you appeared on the campus, or emerged from the Prep school?

There are two things which you should learn—first, that life, especially college life, is a free fight; second, that the Sophomores always win. But you must learn by hard knocks if you won't learn by the experience of others. We admire this in you, but we are sorry for you, knowing as we do, that you can't win. How we pitied you last Fall at the Sophomore-Freshman foot ball game, groveling in the rain and mud for what we knew you would never get. And in the long drawn out flag-fight, how we pitied you when you took down your own flag to save it from capture—a youthful thing to do, but we must remember your youth.

How we out-sung, out-joked, out-did you at the Birthday banquet, after all your lusty practicing, too. We were sorry for you, but the fittest must survive!

As a last grand effort you tried to keep us away from the Senior-Sophomore banquet—but you only gave us a chance to show our loyalty and bravery. Think of the boys who dared, for the sake of a class-mate, to rush up the back stairs of Hulings Hall to save her from the Freshies! How disappointed they must have been when their final efforts failed.

We expect in your history, oh Freshmen, that you will do a lot of boasting—but it's idle—and then you'll end poetically, longing for truth and wisdom with capital letters. '02 will end her history with a letter swiped from a Freshman. It plainly shows the state of their feelings:

hulings hall, Nov. 17, 1899.

Dear Ma,

I don't know how you like my goins on but Ive had a lot of fun at school. But I'll betcher you woodnt call it fun, more like fightin. You see we, that is us freshmen and the sophomores had a flag fite i. e. (that is) a fite about some flag I dont know what flag but it seemed like it was a pritty valuible one. It was a 3 day fite and I was about $\frac{1}{2}$ dead when it was over. You had ought to seen the girls standing on hulings hall, on the roof mind you with that flag, just like flies on the sealing. They threw the flag off the hall and a lot of fellows got it and hollered and all the proffesors was out lookin up at the girls on the hall for fear they would fall of to.

Well we had a foot ball game the boys did pritty well but them sophomores kind of beet us but we felt real bad. I dont like the sophomores several in particular and 1 or 2 in general. Then we wore colors and everybody grabed at each others colors but I know you wouldnt think it was very lady like only the sophomores grabed to.

Must clothes with love to Pa Susie.

HISTORY.

IN writing the history of the Freshmen year of the class of 1903, modesty warns us to remember that glorious as it has been, it is only the beginning of its history. And so we have striven, with most disinterested impartiality, to make this, our first chapter, a true record of our college life, as well as instructive, and entertaining reading for the Freshmen who are to follow in our foot-steps. We do intend to leave footsteps without being reminded of the "lives of great men." (No history is complete without some references to this quotation.)

There is a tradition in our college that the Freshmen must give a banquet at which the Sophomores shall be uninvited guests. The eventful night supposedly arrived. Scattered groups of Sophomores wearily hid behind the trees all over the campus. With breathless attention they await the departure of the Freshman class. Lo! They appear, they proceed down Park Avenue. The Sophomores congratulate one another and follow to the banquet hall. It is a beautiful night. After walking quietly behind the Freshmen for several miles it gradually dawns upon their fertile brains, too fertile this time, that the Freshmen are out for an evening stroll. Somewhat crestfallen they disperse. When the banquet did take place none but the Freshmen knew how glorious it was, for the Sophomores were peacefully dreaming of what they would do on the night of that banquet.

The Freshmen produced the flag this year—and kept it. At Dr. Crawford's mild suggestion the battle was waged on the campus instead of the pavement to save—the pavement. Madly the battle raged. The Sophomores were courageous but the men of 1903 were invincible. Amid the congratula-

The Hall girls were eager to share the combat. The red and brown was hung from Huling's cupola and until noon announced to the entire college that the Freshmen were not to be ignored. By this time the Sophomores were thoroughly aroused. With the aid of the Seniors they found courage to take the cupola door from its hinges after struggling in vain to open it. The Freshman girl on guard then concluded that the precious flag had done its duty and took it down. None too soon, for a rash Sophomore came tumbling up the stairs, siezed the flag and took aim but, as the Freshmen were following, "aimed not aright, or like Cock Robin, shot in a fright." It only fell to the roof where a Freshman threw it down and—the men did the rest. Suffice it to say that the much contested flag graced the Freshman table at the Washington's Birthday banquet.

In the foot ball game we must confess that "the wheel of fortune turned us down." But as the supremacy of that illustrious class was by this time well established, we felt that we could afford to be generous. The umpire awarded the victory to the Sophomores, and the game will long be remembered for the gracious way we proved that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

In basket ball we might have been more fortunate had the Sophomores had the courage to accept our challenge. But, as it is, our unquestionable victory must forever remain unrecorded.

To O. F. C.

When Oscar smiles, our own foolish hearts
Go madly pit-a-pat,
But well we know that Oscar, dear,
Takes little heed of that.

For Oscar's heart is made of stone,
His mind is obdurate,
He says that only foolish men
Bethink them of a mate.

That those who worship a fair Muse,
And give their lives to art,
Are happier far, than those who'd fain
Live only for the heart.

Yet now and then we half suspect
That Oscar finds it sweet
To have the girls all smile on him,
And worship at his feet.

Then why, O! why, thou charming one
Will you permit those lips,
Which only made for kind words were
To give such biting nips.

Your pointed shafts you oft let fly,
To wound and alienate;
Our worship then you turn to scorn,
Our liking into hate.

If always you'd as charming be
As now and then you are
We'd herald your name and sing your fame
To the East and West afar.

—"The Girls."

The Life Musical.

.....

To the college of music a young maid came
A singer to learn to "B."
"Pray what are your terms for cash," she said,
And when she was told said "G!"

The terms arranged, she took her place
"B NATURAL." the teacher said,
"A MINOR point, I may also add
Just throw your tones in your head."

"I can't," she said, with a knowing wink,
And a silly little te-"E"—
"Because my brain is so very large
There isn't room— you 'C'."

You're FLAT," said the teacher, "and yet 'tis plain
That SHARP you mean to 'B.'
Take my advice, don't SCALE such heights,
And leave the REST to me."

A Nagging Neighbor.

The birds that bloom in the spring
Have nothing to do with this rhyme:
The tune that the birdies sing
Will also take none of my time.

Their fur of various hue
Has been praised by scribblers of note:
They bathe in the early dew
And lakes in th'ether they float.

As I already remarked,
When first I commenced this "pome,"
And upon writing embarked,
The birdies can stay at home.

My song of melody rare
Is of singers and players.
'Tis not of the trumpet's blare
Nor of paint put on in layers.

The singers have voices sweet
To charm a savage soul;
The players have fingers fleet
To render the great *Pole.

True 'tis a foretaste of Heav'n
When in mood distracted,
To give one's sense to leaven
Of sweet tones protracted.

But of Purgatory's pains,
Or punishments of Hell,
(Yes, I'm racking my poor brains!)
I've something worse to tell.

Alta with the note divine,
And Amy with the pearly touch,—
What Moyer could the soul refine?
I do confess, I think not much.

Hill and Hall and Maybelle neat,
And mammoth Alexander,
Laughing Waters dimpled sweet—
Moore to the ear do pander.

They transport to Beulah land
And Sara adds her portion,
Smith and Merchant hand in hand
All Chase the world's extortion.

Maybelle and Church in concert mild
And Lord of all creation,
Stem the tide in this bosom wild,
And still a clamoring nation.

A Crane one day a Ruby saw,
And thought it was a Berry;
She took it in her greedy maw,
And made Trax for the wherry.

She was caught in a Pickett fence,
Exposed to Sol's midday Ray.
Along comes a hunter immense—
Shutz her. 'Las and lack-a-day!

But this digression awful—
Not inconsistent truly—
In poet's license lawful,
Is quite coherent duly.

Of all these singers tuneful,
And players, in technique fine;
They're inspiring as moon-ful,
And beverage made on the Rhine.

Whene'r I hear one alone
My soul enraptured out pours.
But when together, I groan!
My head in ag'ny—It roars.

With tone-placing for a song,
Piano-pounding below,
Organ-groaning the day long,
Fiddlers above in a glow.

I've oft been tempted to rebel,
E'en sue the doughty president.
'Twould be, I know, my dying knell.
I'm yet a nearby resident.

*Chopin.

How we love our giddy gurgle,
How we love our aimless flow,
How we love to wind our mouth's up,
How we love to hear them go.

When Wilson Sings.

Like the sound of many waters
Was the noise the people made,
Running from the narrow doorways,
As from coppers on a raid.

"Why, O why is this commotion?
Tell me stranger, tell me, pray!"
"Why, my friend," he quickly answered
"Wallace Wilson sings to-day".

"What," I cried, "my old friend Wilson"
You won't hear him sing to-day."
"Oh! alas, I fear we'll have to,
If we cannot get away."

Mr. Comstock—"Miss Edsall, have some bread."
Miss Edsall—"No, I thank you."
Mr. C—"O, let me press you."
Miss E.—"I wish you wouldn't say that."
Mr. C—"Well, I don't see why you won't."

She (sentimentally) "Hear how tenderly the music floats away and dies on the air."

He (calmly) "Its no wonder. Listen how its being butchered."

Comstock.—"Oh, madame, I dare not tell my age. They say men and music should never be dated."

Grinds.

Mabel Leffingwell.—"So young, so small, yet in so sweet a note,

It seemed the music melted in her throat.

Wilson.—"E'en by his closest friends 'tis said
He hath enlargement of the head."

Zerald.—" 'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all."

Miss Dutton.—"Long and lanky, tall and slim,
But worlds of knowledge stored within."

When "Cubbie" Sings.

How oft we see him nobly proud,
Alone before the rabble crowd;
His voice with angel cadence thrills,
And on the hoary walls it spills.
The spectred memories of song,
"In Facultate" hid so long,
Are quickened to a wild surprise
To hear the young, sweet hymns arise
When "Cubbie" sings.

Celestial bird on earthly bow,
Methinks I hear you twitter now.
Chant on within those College halls,
And as your piping rises, falls,
Perchance, twill waft across the dell
To her we oftentimes call, "Belle"
Who plays at chapel as of yore
And thinks "the time will ne'er be o'er"
When "Cubbie" sings.

"I hear Mae sings like a bird."

"Yes, like a Crane."

Miss Tyler—"I thank God. I'm not as other men."

Miss Edsall—"My kingdom for a man."

Miss Krick—"One may smile and smile and be a villian still."

Why is Miss Graham a curiosity?

Because she has three hands; a left hand, a right hand and she's always behind hand.

"His veering gait
And every motion of his starry train
Seem governed by a strain of music
Audible to him alone."—Comstock.

For civilization has conquered,
And barbarous ways
Meet their doom.
And no thoughts of a pending oration,
Will be shrouding our way
In its gloom;
For a speaker will come
On Commencement,
And talk from his wisdom and lore,
And none will grow tired and sleepy,
And Seniors will loudest encore.

The Relation of the Telephone

To the Career of a Hulings Hall Girl.

"Have some fudge? It isn't very good, for really it kept me so busy listening to the 'phone that I scarcely had time to give my fudge a stir in between rings. But I didn't mind that for it was great fun. Some of the strangest things happened. If you ever want me to do it again—but I must begin and tell you in some sort of a fashion what I have heard and seen. I had scarcely put the fudge on the stove when the 'phone rang and Miss —— was called. I was wondering who might be at the other end of the line. She soon solved this for me by exclaiming, 'Why Mr. X.! How can you think so.' Pause. 'Really! How glad I am. I am just dying to see you.' Pause. 'Enjoy it? O, yes, but you can't think how I missed you?' Pause. 'All right. I will expect to see you to-morrow night. Good-by.'

"To say that I was astonished—but then I suppose it's only natural that a teacher of elocution should admire one with so phenomenal a voice. There now! I am afraid I have betrayed persons if not names. She had scarcely left the room when the bell rang again. This time it was so long before the girl came that Central rang off, for you know it takes some time to come from the end of the corridor on the third floor; but evidently she was not at a loss to know who had called her, for she immediately rang up, saying, '23, please.' 'Is this Mr. ——.' 'Yes.' Pause. 'Yes.' Pause. 'Half-past seven.' "

"Before long the bell rang again. This time it was for the other end of the corridor. She came in with a stately way, went up to the 'phone and in a business-like manner said, 'Hello. Who is this?' Pause. 'Yes, this is Miss ——.' 'The Latin lesson for to-morrow extends through the fourteenth chapter,' and hanging up the receiver, rang off. The bell was just ringing again when study-bell rang, so of course, I didn't find out who was to have been the next. I rather think I know, however, for there is one girl that I don't think a day ever passes without her being called to the 'phone. I was really disappointed not to have her come down, for in her case I should have heard both ends of the conversation. You know she always brings a mediator, she herself having the misfortune of not being able to hear over the 'phone."

No. 2 was not attended with so great success as No. 1 had been, for unfortunately Mrs. Laffer happened to be in the kitchen and, even though several people were called, nothing could be inferred from their replies as to the other part of the conversation because they invariably consisted of 'Yes—yes—I think so—yes,' no doubt having the person at the other end of the line as much confused as to their meaning as No. 2 was. However, after a time Mrs. Laffer went out and two or three interesting things occurred. No. 2 says, 'Shortly after Mrs. Laffer went out two girls came in, and after much consultation one rang up Central and asked for Utica. After a great deal of talking with Central she got Utica, and called for Mr. ——.' 'What train will you be in on?' Pause. 'Yes, I will meet you at the depot.' Pause. 'No, will spend the evening at Miss ——'s down street.' Pause. 'All right. Good-by.' After some more consultation the other girl came to the 'phone. I was not certain whether she would call for 231 or the Kelly

Club. She called the latter and after telling him what had been arranged by the preceding 'phone conversation, invited him to be one of the party.

"Soon afterward another girl was called, who in a business manner said, 'Who is this? Pause. 'No, I don't know, and if you don't tell me this minute, I'll ring off?' Evidently she didn't find out who it was, for she rang off and walked away in outraged dignity.

"No. 3 had a long list all of them very interesting, but I will give only a few of the most striking ones.

"A girl was then called to the 'phone, but when I heard the girl who came down say, 'Yes, this is Miss A., is this No. 79?' I recognized the voice of another girl. She continued, 'What time will you be up?' 'All right' I ventured to ask her why she had answered when Miss A. was called. She answered that Miss A. was out to tea and was to be home in time to have Mr. ——— call to meet her, and she was afraid if Miss A. didn't go down to make arrangements when she was called to, that Mr. ——— would not come at all, so she had determined to act in Miss A.'s place."

"Soon another was called who was so dignified that one would immediately recognize the stately senior talking to a member of the family of one of our austere Profs.

"One more was called who evidently was used to being called often, as you will see from the following: 'No, I don't know. Is it Mr. A?' Pause. 'Well, is it Mr. C?' Pause. 'Is it Mr. E?' Pause. Well, then it must be Mr. G?' Then followed a conversation consisting mainly of 'Your sister told me that.'"

"Many more could be given, particularly if one listens at the table for seldom a dinner passes that some one does not go to the 'phone evidently for the purpose of entertaining those in the dining-hall, or so it would seem from the tone they acquire."

A Spring Lady.

'Tis in the spring time," quoth the maid,
"That all thoughts to love do turn,"
Smiling watched them as they played
At the game which two might learn.

That sweet old story forever new,
From this thrice happy couple here,
For from their glance, each student knew
That each to other was most dear.

And so time passed; in Hulings care
Each day there came a box of sweets
Of Huylers', dainty, fragrant, rare
Most sure he knew how this entreats.

Her room was by sweet odors filled,
For visits breathed into the air,
And roses in profusion stilled,
Their odors for the one so fair.

They walked and walked, to left, to right,
'Twas said four hours of campus took.
He called on her morn, noon and night,
And all their comrades they forsook.

But all things to an end must come,
And so this tale I now relate.
Herself to books she doth succumb,
He's with another girl. Sad Fate!

If all that was is past and fled,
If love for one short week doth last,
If true is false—but some one said,
"Why don't you know the election's past."

And his name was Michael Roy.

Notes.

1. In with this case denotes temporary position in a place. The author's meaning probably is that the girl and her mother were living in rented quarters.

2. Little is known of this city, but recent excavations on the right bank of the East River have led archaeologists to believe that a city bearing that name was located there.

3. This was the name given to a young unmarried female, usually of the lower classes. Compare the use of the word in the terms milk-maid and servant-maid.

4. This pronoun makes the meaning of the clause rather obscure. The question as to which of the two feminines of the preceding clause is its antecedent has been much discussed. We are inclined to think that it refers to the former.

5. For the use of this form to denote a past act continued in past time, see Roby 2999 A. a.

6. The construction of fame is peculiar. The significance of this clause is that the reputation of the city or the girl was wide-spread.

7. Notice that no mention is made of her father.

8. This goes to corroborate the hypothesis of certain classical scholars, that women of that day had two first names.

9. The repetition of the verb is doubtless for the sake of the metre. See Roby 13549 B.

10. We may infer from this that it was customary in those times to give the daughter as cognomen the first name of her mother.

11. From this and other references to Saturday as market day we are led to infer that Sunday, the Sabbath of ancient times, was observed as a day of feasting; for which the necessary provisions were procured on Saturday, which was also pay day.

12. The verb signifies that this was her regular habit.

13. We do not understand this use of the preposition over, for although now airships carry us over rivers, at that time persons were carried across in ferry-boats.

14. The market was a covered building where the rustics assembled to sell their wares. Prof. Long-winded Bluffer is soon to publish an extensive work on the subject of the American market.

15. The ingredients of the sausage are not known exactly. Prof. Know-it-all, A. B., A. M., M. D., D. D., Ph. D., LL. D., argues that the sausage consisted of a mixture of meat taken from a variety of the domestic animals. As Prof. Know-it-all has given the subject careful study, we may accept his conclusion as correct.

16. The learned doctors cannot determine in what sense wise could be used to apply to an article of food, nor how sausage could be like liver. However the two words like and wise may be taken together as forming a connective.

17. These lines are important as the chief source of our information in regard to the diet of the ancient Americans. The three articles of food are probably mentioned as the chief dishes in each course. It is very amusing to us to think of eggs as the first course and liver as the last.

18. The manuscript is here corrupt. These lines are undoubtedly interpolations. It cannot be understood what possible connection they could have with what precedes.

19. In scanning remember the unusual pause after For.

20. That the man had auburn hair evidently implies that he was very handsome.

AFTER HOURS AT HULINGS.

Prep. Election.

And it came to pass that the Preps in "Old Allegheny," becoming dignified by virtue of their importance in banquets, class fights and prayermeetings, gathered themselves together and went unto Prexie, and said unto him, "Behold, thou hast led us well this many years. But, lo, the time of general conference draweth nigh, and perchance thou mayest be elected a bishop or some other high officer in the Synagogue. And therefore, our people, thou shouldst know no more. And we fear us, lest perchance, thy successor may not deal so gently with us, who are weak. We pray thee therefore to permit us to choose a goodly man from among our number, that we may be lead in class yells, class fights and college songs, as the other classes round about us."

And the thing was pleasing unto Prexie. And he said unto them: "Do in this matter as it seemeth good unto thee. Choose unto yourselves a goodly man, a man after thy own heart, to lead thee."

And behold, by the mouth of the herald Taylor, all the people of Prepdome were called together.

Now there was a man of the Preps whose name was Fornear. And in voice he was head and shoulders above every other man in Prepdome. And, lo, he was a mighty man of valor, and had won renown on the football field, being wounded nigh unto death in a game with the varsity team. And when the Preps were come together, some cried out with a loud voice, "Let Fornear be our leader! Let Fornear be our leader." But the tribe of Tammany and the tribe of Breamer cared not to have Fornear of mighty voice, as their leader. And they departed, every man to his room and room-mate. And, lo, the remaining tribes with one accord made Fornear their leader.

And it came to pass that word went forth to all the people of the tribe of Tammany, and the tribe of Breamer, to gather themselves together in Ruter Hall. And, lo they responded to a man. Now there was in the tribe of Tammany, a man named Crawford, small of stature, but crafty, who was the equal of any man on College hill in playing whist, not excepting the giant, Frazier. And it seemed good to the tribe of Tammany and to the tribe of Breamer to make Crawford their leader. And they did so with one accord. And in open rebellion marched out to College Hill waivng banners of yellow and white.

And, lo, the Feast of Eggs drew nigh, when every man departs to his father's house for a season. And it came to pass that every man betook himself to his father's house to keep the feast. And after the Feast of Eggs, when they had again assembled on College hill, lo, Fornear of mighty voice was nowhere to be found. And when it was learned through the mouth of Prexie, that Fornear had departed from among his brethern to dwell among an uncivilized people, in a land far toward the setting sun, all the people with one accord, shouted "Crawford is our leader! Crawford is our leader!"

And, lo, Prepdom once more stood a united people under the banner of yellow and white.

Constancy.

The warm wind whispered softly as we strayed
Along a winding path, one summer night;
The stars were shining, and there was no moon
To dim their milder glory with its light.

He said he loved me, and he would be true—
Ah! sweet the story sounded in my ear.
He vowed his love was endless and as fixed
As the large star that shone so bright and clear.

I looked at blue-eyed Vega overhead,
Thulean and Polaris, the Great Bear,
At red Antares and Arcturus bright,
Unchangeable, eternal, shining there.

Alas! his love was not like one of these,
But as Jupiter that shines so large and clear.
And Jupiter is fickle, for he moves
His place, one constellation every year.

Last night I heard him as to other ears
The self-same tale of love he whispered low.
Like Jupiter his love—Undiminished it shines,
But changes places as seasons come and go.

Evolution of Church Report.

Nineteenth Century.

The Evolution Expounded.

Evolution is that series of changes under natural law which involves continuous progress from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous in structure, and from the single and simple to the diverse and manifold in quality and function. The process is by some limited to organic beings, but we apply it to the church report. In the good old days the registrar would call the roll and the boys would answer "NOT AT CHURCH." But man being of a very progressive nature commenced to express his thoughts on paper. The unicellular report was introduced. This single celled report of the latter part of the nineteenth century became differentiated to a small extent; it divided into a bi-celled report, giving room for the date and place of attendance. Following out the steps of evolution we must expect some very highly differentiated forms of report life in the next century. Taking a glance into the future we see this, once harmless little cell, developed into a highly differentiated and complex organism, such as Allegheny has never known.

Twentieth Century Report.

I hereby certify that I have been in regular attendance at the morning church service, on time and in the front seat, paying good attention on the following Sundays:

January 5, 1901. Methodist Church. Text. St. John. 9-4.

Synopsis of Sermon—Every person must do his work or accomplish some good end while in the prime of life. In the evening of life the lights grow dim and sooner or later man must cast his burden down. It behooves us to start out with a good purpose in view, while yet we stand viewing the coming prospects of life. In other words, work while it is day for the night will come when no man can work.

January, 12, 1901. Methodist Church. Text—Proverbs, 26, 20.

Synopsis of Sermon—"Where no wood is, there the fire goes out. Where there is no tale-bearer the strife ceases." This lesson can be applied to all. Heap not coals of indignation upon your fellows, for wood is certain to be at hand and a conflagration sure to be started. It is always best to keep the wood and tale-bearers in the back-ground and by so doing save strife.

January 19, 1901. Methodist Church. Text, Proverbs 25-28.

Synopsis of Sermon—"He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down and without walls." The model man is one who, surrounded by his enemies hurling hate in his very teeth, stands the storm like a fortress. He always bears a pleasant smile. Form a character so strong that, like Gibraltar, it can stand the most stormy scenes of life.

January 26, 1901. Methodist Church. Text, Psalms 137:2.

Synopsis of Sermon—There was no sermon but they sang some of the following hymns: Come Back to Your Father, Blest be the Tie That Binds, I'll Hang My Harp on a Weeping Willow Tree; Onward, Christian Soldiers; While the Days are Going By, Lead Me to the Rock, The Jordan Now in View; Tell Me the Old, Old Story; Guide Me. Doxology.

Prof. Smallwood came to college one wintry morning, but the weather was too severe for the complexion of his necktie. Free Methodism or more necktie.

J. Wright (who has leaned back in a chair with feet perched on the heater)—“My feet are very cold, Doctor.”

J. Wright—“But! Doctor, it is my feet that are cold.”

Why they call Allegheny College a Christian institution?
How long before Doc. will be made a bishop?
Who does so much night prowling?
Why the beer wagon stops in front of Wilcox Hall?
Who is Munroe's tonsorial artist?
What the baby did with Morey's beard?
Where Dutt gets his authority for saying "paraboler?"
Who is Buckie Wright's authority on the weather?
What became of Smallwood's skeleton?
What makes Tommie's eyes blink so cute?
Why Smith is so popular with the ladies?
Why Ross had to leave the State for a year?

Why that case of empty beer bottles was left in the basement under President Crawford's office?

Lover's Lane.

.....

You have heard, I dare say, throughout your whole life,
That the highway to knowledge is steep;
That the rocks are jagged, the stones are sharp;
You must look before you leap.

But all this nonsense you need not mind—
The reason I give is plain—
For the boards are warped and the nails are sharp
As you traverse Lover's Lane.

And to pick a step here and a foothold there—
Why, you needn't worry your brain
To look at your feet or to notice the path
As you stumble through Lover's Lane.

To be sure, at night, it's very dark,
And your heart gives a throb of pain,
When you think of the possible faculty man
A-lurking in Lover's Lane.

But the way to get to Hulings, they say,
And to sing in the white-robed train,
Is to go by the path that is narrow and crooked,
And such is Lover's Lane.

So scour not the hill for a place to rise,
And roam not over the main,
But tell the faculty to let you off
At the entrance to Lover's Lane.

The Pony's Education.

The Pony's Education—One of the Not-So Stories.
(After Kipling's Just-So Stories.)

In the far off times, O precious little Preppie, when the English were not trying to civilize the Boers because diamonds hadn't begun to grow in South Africa, the pony was not so wise in the dead languages as he is now ; he was just a merry, romping little fellow, and this is how it happened he learned all about Latin and Greek :

One day he and his mischievous cousin, champion knock-'em-all-down goat, while out playing, wandered to an old monastery. "Let's go in," said goat, "and 'vestigate. There's some old chaps in there that are dead easy (which is the way all C.-K.-E.-A.-D. goats talk, you must know, precious little Preppie), for once I was chewin' the coat tails of one and he only turned around and said, 'My young friend, are you aware of the fact that this is fast day?'"

With these introductory remarks, C.-etc., goat pushed the door open and went in, but pony stood outside, for he was a timid little fellow ; only he had one great fault, and Oh, it was a very great one, precious little Preppie, and one of which you must beware—he was always hungry. His mother had scolded him again and again for his inordinate and insatiable desire for refreshment, but in vain. So when goat called to him, "Come here, Fraidie Pony, I've found some bully grub," (the language of all such goats, you remember, Preppie,) he yielded to the temptation and went in.

Champion goat was industriously chewing the corner of a roll of parchment. The room was one in which a wise, withered old monk copied books, and a great pile of classical manuscripts lay on the floor. "Pitch in," gasped C.-K.-E.-A.-D. goat, stopping to take breath as the last fragment of Zenophon disappeared. "They're not tender, but they're bloomin' good." "But, please, champion goat," said pony, "mamma doesn't 'low me to chew gum ; she says it will take all the curl out of my mane." "O, clothes lines, I'll dare you," murmured goat, his mouth again full, and pony, being a distant relative of the small boy, could not resist the invitation when put in that form, and ate greedily of the parchment dainties.

And when the last of the pile had disappeared and C.-K.-E.-A.-D. goat had swallowed the pen and ink for dessert, Oh, how sick pony grew, precious little Preppie ! He ran home crying to his mamma and said, "All gaul is divided into three parts," (which you must know, Precious Preppie, were the words of the immortal Cæsar).

"Mercy, child, how you talk !" said his mother ; "come to the doctor immediately." And when the old doctor, putting on his spectacles, felt Pony's pulse and asked him where he felt bad, Pony only cried "O, god-like Odysseus, O, prudent Telemachues !" (which I must inform you, Preppie, were two worthy gentlemen friends of Homer), and then the doctor shook his spectacles off and said, "An evil spirit is in him ; I cannot cure him."

So Mamma Horse took Pony home and the poor little fellow had a hard time of it, for the other ponies would not play tag nor marbles with him, for they said he called them horrid names and talked senseless stuff. But his mamma found him very useful to mind the baby, for all he had to do was to begin to recite Cicero's orations and the infant equines would go to sleep immediately.

So this is how all the ponies you will see when you get big and go to college and all I hope you won't see, Precious Preppie, can speak so fluently in Latin and Greek.

But, if you should ask me why goats are not so learned, it is because Champion K.-E.-A.-D. goat was so accustomed to subsisting on a diet of tin cans, leather harness, and articles of any material whatsoever, that even the dry bones of Virgil and Thucydides could not impair his digestive apparatus.

Lost Hope,

OR

Adventures of two Bills in Hades.

.....

"Good morning! old scout. What's in the atmosphere this morning?"

"Nothing special Bill. Am a little 'fussed up' by the rush of registration in the various Greek Departments, but am in for a little frolic with all my 'penicopious nature.' What is your plan for the morning?"

"Well! as I am one of the regular fixtures of Allegheny College, and being at the head, I have an invitation from Satan to visit Hades and witness a foot-ball game between some of our great historical prodigies and a 'hot stuff eleven' composed of Mohammedans. Are you in for it?"

"Well I should smile! with all my heart. Would rather see it—being interested in old time sports—than hold four aces to a $13 jack pot."

Throwing out my chest and repeating a few magic words, which incidentally I had up my sleeve, Bill and I gradually began to rise, but in our rise, we meet our downfall. Swiftly the earth whirled by us. Like comets we shot by the different planets, where psychological phenomena and Grecian art were cheaper than good earth. After much, may I say? flying, we were precipitated on the banks of a dark stream, living with the faces of earthly beings who were taking their last swim in wet water.

Wandering along the bank we came to the wharf. Charon, the boatman, greeted us with a familiar smile and bid us enter his shell boat. We did this, and in a short time we had crossed the living stream and were landed safe and sound in Hades. Old Satan, with a sardonic grin, came running up and gave us a most livid greeting. We must make haste old class-mates—for he had long since received his diploma with a Ph. D. ascribed on it P. D. Q.—for the game is about to be called.

Carefully picking our way between the pit-falls of burning sulphur we arrived at the amphitheater. This was indeed a colossal structure formed much like the Roman theater. The great tiers of seats were constructed of earthly skeletons, the arena was paved with teeth and the whole place illuminated with incandescent skulls. The goal posts were the skeletons of an extinct race of giants, and the foot-ball was nothing less than the preserved skull of Plato. At the sight of this man, Bill and I held up our hands in mutual admiration. Great furrows of Grecian learning were plainly visible on the forehead and so full of intelligence that, while being kicked around the field for practice, eloquent volumes of literature saturated the air like the college bell at home.

We were awakened from this dream by the voice of Satan, commanding us to our seats. No sooner done than the great gong at the entrance sounded and in rushed the teams. The Mohammedan horde we did not recognize, but the other eleven were very familiar to us. Aristotle played center, Savonarola played quarter, Gregory and Leo the halves, and Charlie Martel full back. The other positions were filled by less prominent men.

At the very first move Charlie bucked the line for a fare-ye-well, then Leo went around the end for further orders and Gregory carried the sublime Plato within a yard of the line. The ball was given to the "Mohams." on downs. With a cry of Allah! they swooped down the field. Charlie Martel was dis-mantled; Leo and Gregory were excommunicated on the spot and poor Savonarola whirled along the field at a tremendous rate, but was suddenly stopped by his bloomers catching on a tooth from which the filling had been picked. The Mohammedans seemed destined to carry the day. But no. See! there comes Pipin in all his glory. He takes Charlie's place back of the line and the tide is turned. With fearful plunges he scatters the Crescents and saves the day.

The game now becomes too one-sided for interest so we turn our attention to earthly affairs.

"Have you forgotten Bill that we need a new library up there to our college?" "Not much" says I "and being of a prying nature, I move you that we pry out the gold and diamond fillings from the teeth near the edge of the arena, go back to earth with our pockets full and erect a building that will make the other structures think they are in ———."

"Tush! Tush!" Be careful what you say, Bill!"

"All right. Let us to work."

With the eagerness for gold that only people of the earth know, we commenced to pry and fill our pockets. So eager were we in our work that we never noticed the game but were suddenly brought to our senses by a mighty applause signifying the end of the game.

"They cheered so loud

That all the hollow deep of Hell resounded."

The game was ended. The Mohammedans were conquered and once again Hades was Saved.

Satan, who had refereed the game, now came over, offering to show us the place. We, naturally wishing to get away as soon as possible, insisted that earthly matters needed our immediate attention and that we must go back at once. Very reluctantly he gave in to our plans, taking great care to lead us through a very hot district on our way back to the river. Did I say Hot? Well! It was: Extremely torrid. The gold in our pockets melted and found its way to the ground by various channels. We were much heated both in body and mind. After all our hopes of good things to be accomplished in our dear institution, they gradually dropped away one by one, much after the fashion of "Hot Drops."

We reached the river—minus the treasure—and after exchanging kind farewells with our dear host, were ferried over the river, and in a short time were once again held in the strong arms of gravity.

Monty's Pictures in Faculty Meeting.

The Freshman-Sophomore Scrap.

The nineteenth century has been a century of war. It opened with the thunder of Napoleon's cannon on the red stained field of Marengo. Its last decade bears still a martial type while tidings of struggle and victory are home from the classic realms of Allegheny's Campus. The conflict still is fresh in memory though 'tis Spring time now and white winged Peace broods o'er the field of valiant deeds while semi-quiet rules at last in Huling's Hall. Nothing remains to mark the scene of contest; not even a dilapidated hat spurned from the brow of some palestinian youth, a shred of clothing stripped from some "would-be Herculean" form, nor a button torn madly from its moorings, its thread of life cut short. Even the spots where struggling classmen strewed the earth are covered now with other verdure of a softer hue.

How shall we describe that all may realize and feel the spirit which found expression in the Freshman-Sophomore scrap. Shall we compare its course to that of the orb of day? The sun rose that morning; so did Sophomore, so did Freshman. The sun displayed his colors and grew warmer as he flaunted them. Their colors too were in evidence while their temper seemed inclined to further a caloric bent. Red grew the wheeling sun while black and blue became the shins of sons of men. At last the sun sank toward the watery earth. So sank the Freshmen-Sophomore sons, borne down by hostile forms of mortal clay.

We had chapel that morning but neither song nor prayer deterred the war dance of the waiting braves. The Chieftain of the Faculty stood in the midst of the Chapel Wigwam and counselled peace. The rival tribes were not prepared to smoke the calumet. Nothing less strong would satisfy their appetites than cigarettes. The "Council of More Venerable Braves" filed from the chief seats of the wigwam. Their counsel had not prevailed. The medicine men incited to scrimmage. The signal is given. To arms, to waists, to legs, to win they fly, 'till Fresh-Soph pates are pillowed on the cooling cheek of Campus mold. Look at the individual warriors and note their names. See that mass of panting flesh fall with a "Dull" thud while the "Green lee" shakes with such concussion. Behold that theatrical looking man with the evil eye. At last he is out "Dunn." Now feel the settling down of a heavy "Paul," while the lofty Ensign is brought low. No officers need interfere for already the "Squier" is overpowered while his colleague tries to "Harris" the offenders. See the "Union Jack" of England bearing his "golden crown" and receiving his share of stripes from Freshmen stars. See yonder "Bird" wishing he might fly away and smooth his ruffled plumage. No carpenter is there and yet a "Hall" is floored with the aid of "block heads." An "Earl" appears but dignity forsakes him. There is no time for theological speculations but an "Armenian doctrine" obtrudes. A short cut sophomore tries to "Buzza" round. A Lampe is over set but makes light of it. Tradesmen are not noted and the frangomaillarian "Smith" blows to no purpose for his metal is already keene.

The battle was not over but the college has a "Faculty" for arbitration. Two days of struggle must be overborne and undergone before the protocol is signed and interclassical communications established. The Sachem is revered. Freshman and Sophomore relax their warm embraces. No live are lost but the college "Taylor" should now be useful. The seams of "hand-me-downs" are not invulnerable against the American policy of "Expansion." Some one perhaps has lost a necktie but he has gained a "choler."

Meanwhile the martial spirit was imbibed by the fair sex and Huling's Hall became the scene of female folly. Allies appeared, the prisoners within her walls were released. We will not penetrate the mystery of the reconnoiters nor proclaim the owner of the valiant arm which struck the colors from their dizzy height. Enough to know she was a woman of the "Elizabethian type."

The contest is now only a part in our college history. But long as the leaves of this Kaldron shall be preserved, so long shall remain the story of this struggle as a warning to the un-matriculated generations who may follow in our footsteps.

Then farewell to "classic" battles,
"Riding" toward the goal of knowledge;
We shall soon be ranked as veterans
With the A. M. of the college.

The Ideal Student.

.....

The clock in yonder tower
Long since has told the hour.
This lesson, deep, my weary brain,
Has tried to master, but in vain.

My mind o'erburdened with great care
Refuses longer the strain to bear;
But now rebels, the task disdains,
And high in college life it sails.

The morrow's "flunk" — my only care
My pipe shall soon disperse as chaff;
As looking from my window chair,
I picture study as one "big" laugh.

"A Little Bird Told It."

.....

Down the path by the river's brim
Ned and Lois were walking one day,
Under the trees 'neath the shadows dim,
With bird songs and blossoms to cheer their way

But the loviest blossom that decked their path
Was nothing so lovely as Lois herself;
Merry and sober, tormenting and grave,
A mischievous, lovable, starry-eyed elf.

The tall ferns bowed to them as they passed,
"Lovers, of course," the alders cried.
But a bobolink eyed them both, from o'erhead,
Then hopped to the fence by the river's side.

From brush to fence rail, from branch to tree,
He followed the pair as they went along;
Slipping so quietly in and out,
And not once telling his thoughts in song.

But ever he chattered to Ned as they passed,
"Kiss her, O, kiss her, so pretty, I'd try,
I know her, she'll like it, oh, try it and see,
I'll never tell anyone, no, not I."

The alders murmured, "Did you see that?"
The tall ferns waved in grave surprise.
But that bobolink! High to the tallest tree
Like a flash of silver they saw him rise.

And then in a jubilant burst of song
He carolled and trilled in exultant bliss.
"I'll tell it, I'll tell it, I'll tell, I say,
I saw it, I'll tell it, he gave her a kiss."

The Song of the Sophs.

(With apologies to Bobbie Burns.)

Shall we around this festal school,
Low hang our heads, and a' that?
Junior and Fresh, we passed them by,
We frolic here for a' that.

For a' that and a' that
Our plans we hid, for 'a that.
The Freshman is an easy mark,
The Junior, too, for a' that.

What tho' in class we little do,
Make awful flunks, and a' that?
Yie Freshies "trots" and Juniors, too.
A Soph's a Soph for a' that.

For a' that and a' that,
Their good term marks, and a' that,
The silent Soph, tho' e'er sae noor,
Will finish strong for a' that.

Ye see you Juniors, like a lord,
Wha' struts and stares and a' that?
Tho' Preppies worship at his word
His but a coop for a' that.

For a' that and a' that,
His knowing air and a' that,
The Soph of independent mind;
He looks and laughs at a' that.

174

The Seniors soon will all be gone,
Wie caps and gowns, and a' that,
But still we have the common bond,
We love the Freshies, and a' that.

For a' that and a' that,
Tho' far away, and a' that,
We'll flunk of times at Alleghe
The same old story, and a' that.

Then let us pray that come what may,
Hard times, ill luck, and a' that,
Seniors and Sophs, o'er a' the earth,
May bear the prize, and a' that.

For a' that and a' that,
Se's coming yet, for a' that,
Senior and Soph, the world o'er,
Will do great things, and a' that.

The Future of Alleghe.

Of our future no one knows; but
When Prexy is a bishop;
When Dutt's and Monty's jokes renew their youth;
When Tommy no longer works hash of the English language;
When Morey's treatise on the proleptic use of adjectives appears;
When Wright is no longer thankful for the weather;
When Elliott has compared his church reports with good
St. Peter's;
Then will the fame of our college spread itself like a green bay tree;
Then will Allegheny be turning out preachers from the Prep department;
Then will Dr. Crawford smile his broadest smile
And give us all a free pass to the New Jerusalem, far away.

When Love Was Born.

A glance whose winning power no words could utter ;
A blush that deepened like the tints of morn ;
A sigh,—a touch that thrilled like living fire ; —
And Love was born.

A moan of anguish,—and a weary silence ;
And then a gasp, a little cry forlorn,
As life took breath to start its sorrowing journey ;
And Love was born.

A shining star, o'er trackless wastes and hill tops ;
White angels heralding the coming morn ; —
A song of rapture,—peace on earth, and glory !
And Love was born.

Beware.

I know a Prof (?) as square's can be,
Take care !
He can that paper plainly see,
Beware ! Beware !
Oh ! use it not,
It is fooling thee.

At it you give a glance or two,
Take care !
Though what it says is always true,
Beware ! Beware !
And trust it not,
It is fooling thee.

He has a manner void of guile,
Take care !
He gives a glance and then a smile,
Beware ! Beware
Trust him not,
He's not fooled by thee.

What the Freshman Thinks.

That it is an unpardonable sin to make a good, clean flunk.
Strange how they will get over it.

That a good line of jolly and a pat on the back from Dutt means sure pass.

That the examinations in modern languages are more of a test of physical endurance than a mental acquirement.

That the rising bell in the Hall means that it is time to get up.

That they had better cram for those English examinations.

That the Sophomores have been in one more fight than they have.

That Dr. Crawford smiles only on his best friends.

The Principal of Prep. Department.—Try rinsing the bottles in very hot water immediately after using. If the milk persists in souring write us again.

Freeman.—“I had a drink of nice warm milk this morning.”

Frazier.—“Oh! You must have had a pull with the cow.”

Lord Chesterfield says, “To laugh is vulgar.”—Dr. Tommy.

“I hope to be a bishop and with the Bishops stand: To sit among the ministers and hold them by the hand.”—“Doc.”

Prof. Smith, (In History Class)—“Miss Merchant, which one of the Presidents is your ideal?”

Miss Merchant.—“Madison of course.”

“Among the music of her songs

She fearfully caroused.”—Miss Logan.

A LOST HEAD.

There was a Prof. in our school
And he was wonderous wise;
He jumped against his class-room door
And then he jumped again.

There was a crowd of students in the hall
To see the awful sight:
He jumped again, the door broke in,
French II is called, you may begin.

“I wish I could walk like Prof. Munroe.”—Dillon.

“Never strike a moustache when it is down.”—McMichael.

“Hark, how creation's deep, musical chorus,
Unintermitting, goes up into heaven!”—Glee Club.

“You'd scarce expect one of my age
To speak in public on the stage.”

—Miss McCray.

Apropos of Prexie's little Chicago boomlet for the mitred hat, it seems to be strictly in order to throw bouquets where, in view of the prospective episcopate, they may exercise an influence on the disposition of ecclesiastical favors. Far be it from us to discredit this worthy impulse. We desire to put in our best licks for Prexie and we all hope he will some day reach his goal. There is no man in America who possesses so vigorous, forcible and interesting a style of discourse. A short extract from his world famous lecture on "Savonarola," which we reproduce as nearly as we can remember it, will serve to illustrate his pleasing and dramatic style of diction. "Under the house of Este, Ferrara was famous throughout Italy for its gaiety and splendor. Nowhere did the aristocracy maintain so much of feudal magnificence and chivalrous enjoyment. The square castle of red brick, which still stands in the middle of the town, was thronged with poets, players, fools who enjoyed an almost European reputation, court flatterers, knights, pages, scholars and fair ladies. But beneath its cube of solid masonry, shut out from daylight by a seven-fold series of iron bars, lay dungeons in which the objects of the duke's displeasure clanked chains and sighed their lives away."

The student of modern literature is moved to congratulate Dr. Crawford on his admirable group of the methods of style of a certain famous historian recently deceased. A comparison of the above passage with page 86 of Symond's Short History of the Renaissance will serve to show how admirably he has succeeded in reproducing that author's style.

"Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
As shallow streams seen dimpling all the way."

chiselled beauty."—Pudge.

Answers to Correspondents.

....

Womer.—Yes, Willie, this is a very inappreciative world and we sadly fear that it will never learn to admire your high tenor notes. With a more commanding figure you could hold the world in ecstasy. As a remedy we would suggest dried apples slightly covered with hot water taken before every meal. This will not only swell your figure but also a few of your "bum" notes.

Miss Phillips.—As far as our knowledge goes, we feel safe in telling you that Paul is a very fine young fellow. He is very ambitious and active; do not smother his ambition but give his activity full reign and we feel confident that he will come your way before the year is over.

Prof. Ross.—No. Decidedly no. It would be utterly impossible for us to boom you for a full professorship in the college, not being of the same opinion as the faculty, that you are fitted for it. On the contrary, we think you are better fitted for the principal of the Prep. school, distributor of cards and chastiser of infants.

Motten.—Yes, Roger, you are right. Always obey papa and mama and stay out of the rushes. Don't mind if the boys do tease you; stay with the girls, they will be your friends. When you have grown larger they will all run from you.

Enquirer.—We can't inform you definitely where Haskins got his eye in mourning. Of course he tells about running into a bed post, but we know he was out on the campus when it happened. However we will say that this peculiar style of black is a "bird."

Prof. Dutton.—We certainly admire your new barn and all pronounce it a marvel of modern architecture. The color of the roof being black gives the impression that the contents might be in mourning, but we doubt it. That acute angular formation on the off side is marvelous. Please accept our congratulations.

Swaney.—We sadly fear that your case is hopeless. An ordinary case of swell-head may be cured, but when complications set in and the case becomes chronic, it is beyond redemption. No man with a single symptom such as consciousness of personal beauty, pride of million dollar ancestry, perfect confidence in his own intellectual ability or the wild hallucination that he knows everything, can possibly survive. We would advise a good nunnery as your refuge.

Miss McCray.—Yes, Iva, we feel sure that you will make a decided hit on the stage. Just one little bit of friendly advice. When you appear behind the foot-lights for the first time be sure and have perfect control of your eyes. The slightest motion of the lid might be interpreted as a wink and would give you a reputation as a flirt with the gallery gods.

Blaisdell.—In regard to your inquiry we feel ashamed to admit that we have read some of your fierce contributions to the daily press, but rest assured we regret it. To be perfectly candid with you, they are on the bum, in fact d——m bum. For your own welfare and future development we strongly urge that you give up editorial work, go back to the farm and cultivate "sour grapes." This seems to be the occupation that the good Lord intended you for.

Walker.—No, Lewis, we cannot think of anything that will add to your beauty or make you more killing to the girls. You are a dear boy from your cute little feet (included angle of 179 degrees, 59 minutes, 59 seconds) to the artistic arranged curls on your oblate spheroid.

There's Truth in Fiction.

What better investment can be made than in a copy of the International? In this royal quarto volume the professional and the business man, the artisan, the teacher, the student, and every family will find a mine of information, and find it arranged in a convenient form for hand, eye, and mind.

Chas. W. Eliot, LL.D., President of Harvard University, says:
It is a wonderfully compact storehouse of accurate information.

The International Should be in Every Household.

It is standard authority of the United States Supreme Court, the Government Printing Office, and the Executive departments generally, and is more widely used than any other dictionary in the world.

U-PI-DEE.

A new Co-ed has alighted in town,
U-pl-ice, U-pl-da!
In an up-to-datest tailor-made gown, U-pl-de-i-da!
The boys are wild, and prex is, too,
You never saw such a hulla-ba-loo.

CHORUS.—U-pl-dee-i-dee-i-da! etc.

Her voice is clear as a soaring lark's,
And her wit is like those trolley-car sparks!
When 'cross a muddy street she flits,
The boys all have conniption fits!

The turn of her head turns all ours, too,
There's always a strife to sit in her pew;
'Tis enough to make a parson drunk,
To hear her sing old co-ca-che-lunk!
