40 Will Testify On Defamation At State College

place after Prof. McKenzie was summoned to the offices of the State Education Commissioner in Trenton to answer allegations by McConnell and Prof. Villarejo.

Most of the evidence about the homosexual activities at Glassboro State was based on statements made to McConnell and Prof. Villarejo by Edmund O. Mintz, former assistant professor of English.

JEALOUSY FLARES

Mintz, whose whereabouts is unknown, told the two that another English professor threatened him with "grave physical danger" if he did not indulge in homosexual acts with him.

He said the faculty member also engaged in homosexuality with several students and argued with another teacher over "rights" to a favorite student.

In depositions filed with the court thus far, McConnell also stated he personally observed "bizarre" actions on the part of Prof. McKenzie and was told by a cleaning woman that she had observed the professor holding hands with several students.

SLATED FOR TENURE

Another professor, McConnell testified, called him "darling" and "beautiful" one morning at the college.

Dr. Robinson has charged that McConnell instigated the homosexual allegations because the professor's contract was not going to be renewed for the 1964-1965 academic year. He was slated to gain tenure, as it would have been his fourth year at the college.

The college president was reportedly upset by criticism from McConnell and Prof. Villarejo over Dr. Robinson's failure to expand the curriculum beyond education courses.

ETHICS QUESTIONED

Dr. Robinson and the two faculty members are being defended in the suit by former State Sen. Thomas F. Connery, Jr., who has been retained by the State Attorney General's office.

Segal, McConnell's attorney, has accused the Attorney General's office of unethical practice for first working with his client when the allegations were turned over and then turning around and defending the three educators in the suit.

Classes Overflow in Halls Gateway High School Rushes Annex

WOODBURY HEIGHTS, Sept. 21.—Classes are being held in the cafeteria, auditorium and study halls at Gateway Regional High School while workmen are rushing to complete an $800,000 addition.

The addition, which nearly doubles the school's capacity, might have been ready this fall except for a 10-week delay caused by a plumber's strike this summer.

The project is now expected to be completed by Christmas, said John Leiko, school superintendent.

Gateway Regional—embracing Wenonah, National Park, Westville and Woodbury Heights—is pulling its students out of Woodbury High School.

This year the district is accommodating 10th grade students. Formerly the school operated only as a junior high.

Next year the district will run its own 11th grade, so only the seniors from the four municipalities will still go to Woodbury High, on a tuition basis.

By September, 1968, Gateway Regional will house all junior and senior high students from the four municipalities.

With the addition, the school will have a functional capacity of 1550 students. The district is expected to reach this number by 1972.

Counting the students it is sending to Woodbury High, the district has about 1200.

Woodbury High itself is overcrowded.

Construction on the addition began Feb. 15. The $800,000 bond issue was approved by the voters June 22, 1965.

Gateway Regional was designed as an "open end" type site, most of which was annexed of building, anticipating a major addition, according to Leiko.

This is the third year of operation for the building.

The addition includes 15 classrooms, a new library, a physics laboratory, two biology labs, a chemistry lab, a typing room, a room for practical office training, a drafting room, one vocal music and one art room, a building trades shop, an automotive shop, home economics rooms for food and clothing, plus auxiliary and storage areas.

The addition will free some space in the present building for other purposes.

Leiko said the regional district is unique in that the four municipalities do not have common boundaries.

The school is on a 40-acre site, most of which was annexed of building, anticipating a major addition, according to Leiko.

Woodbury Heights. About 35 acres were purchased from Deptford township by the Gateway Regional School Board.

National Park is seven miles from the school, Westville is five miles away, and Wenonah is three miles. All their students are bused.

Leiko said cooperation of residents of all four municipalities with the school administration "has been outstanding."
